Your Ports of Call

Alaska's capitol city, Juneau is located right in the midst of the Tongass National Forest. Shore excursions include helicopter and dog sled tours of the Mendenhall Glacier, one of the most popular glaciers in Alaska. Outings via the Mt. Roberts Tramway will take you up 1,800 feet over the city.

When gold was discovered in the Klondike, the settlement of Skagway grew overnight from one cabin into a city of 20,000. The prospectors finally left, but the false-front buildings and boardwalks remain. Taste the history at the Red Onion Saloon or at the Klondike Gold Rush National Historical Park.

Tracy Arm and the Twin Sawyer Glaciers is home to an endless array of both animal and plant life. It is common for visitors to see humpback whales, Stellar sea lions, seabirds and bears or moose. Located in the southeast region, near the capitol city of Juneau, Tracy Arm host the most blue ice of all the glaciers with spectacular cliffs spiraling out of the water.

Ketchikan has its roots in the fishing and logging industries, and visitors can still experience the frontier feel of this historical town. Tourists always enjoy a visit to Ketchikan's Creek Street, once the site of the houses of "ill-repute" and speakeasies back in the Gold Rush days.

The charming seaside town of Victoria, B.C. is the oldest city on Canada's West coast. Originally chosen as a trading post of Britain's Hudson Bay Company and named capitol of British Columbia in 1868, much of the British influence remains today.
